Jack London

This season, get a stylish injection into your wardrobe with Jack London's tailored fashion-forward menswear. The new collection stays true to the Jack London aesthetic, playing on a variety of textures and styles that take inspiration from the 60s. Think trademark classic tailoring, separates featuring deep shades of red, lots of plaid and to-die-for trench coats.

Karla Špetić

Fifteen years ago Karla Špetić was a refugee leaving war-torn Dubrovnik. In 1993 she settled in Australia with design on her mind. She made her Rosemount Australian Fashion Week debut in 2008 and has made a name by creating stylishly unique and effortlessly luxe designs.

The new 'Borderlands' collection evokes the essence of suburban Sydney. The quirky, coloured terraces, often grouped in vibrant mixes of mismatched rows, were the base of this season's bold collection.

Pair that with Špetić's, now signature, use of photographic prints and you get a dazzling collection that combines unusual colour combinations, flattering contrasts, ornate detailing and beautiful prints. This season also sees a brave pairing of common winter fabrications of angora with silks and leather.

Špetić cites the concept of individual styling as an ever evolving trend as her primary influence. "In this collection I was absorbed by street fashion and the way people style themselves. I found that very fresh and inspiring."
